

The Society for Social and Political Philosophy (SSPP) seeks to promote debate and scholarship in social and political philosophy. Through meetings, events, and publications the society aims to provide an inclusive, non-hierarchical, and interdisciplinary forum for interested scholars from various disciplines, orientations, and training, to engage in issues concerning political and social theory. When and where possible and appropriate, the society will provide support for researchers in the humanities and the social sciences who pursue these themes, and will represent the interest of its members within professional organizations, congresses, or associations, national or international.
